

I'm furious, Cynthia.

I'm furious that so many of our young children are racing against time to save their future – something they shouldn't have to do in the first place – and our leaders are laughing in their faces.

The New York Times

Court Quashes Youth Climate Change Case Against Government

In a recent ruling in the Juliana v United States case, a federal appeals court threw out a landmark climate change lawsuit brought on behalf of young people.

Juliana v United States is a case brought on against the federal government by plaintiff Kelsey Juliana on behalf of Our Children's Trust, a nonprofit that's backing 21 young adults who filed the lawsuit.

This decision is a tyrannical blow to climate activists, environmental organizations, and future generations. It demonstrates the limits of a court's willingness to assign responsibility for the harms caused by greenhouse gases. It lets our leaders off the hook for their inaction.

We must hold them accountable. Help us build a movement by chipping in now.

What's astounding, Cynthia, is that the New York Times reports "The five years since the case was first filed have been the five hottest years in the age of accurate records."

These young people have every right to be furious. Everyone in this world should be furious. Our planet is incinerated to embers. They have no future on a planet that is increasingly becoming unlivable. We must do better. We must fight back.

Help us fight the cruelties,

Rob